

ADAM paces, a picture of thought and contemplation.

ADAM

Men and women are no different. When a guy approaches a woman at a bar he's not thinking about how great her personality is, he's not thinking about how many kids or picking out curtains for the new house. He's guided by one simple, but very primal thing - attraction. You see a woman is a lot like Christmas. Sure, when you peel back the wrapping you hope there's something there worth keeping, but in the days leading up to it, damned if you're not initially drawn to that shiny ne wrapping.

Adam clasps his hands together, allowing him to clench and flex, admiring his own wrapping.

ADAM (CONT'D)

That's why women are no different. When you're approaching them at that bar they're not thinking about much else other than the one single decision they have to make in that moment...Is he cute enough for me to talk to, or how many free drinks can I get out of him before he gives up?

Hands out to either side, Adam flashes a smile.

ADAM (CONT'D)

Fortunately for some of us, the wrapping is pretty damn appealing.